FACULTY SPOTLIGHT— Susan Nylander, Associate Professor of English

Please tell me a little bit about yourself.

I am the youngest of four, but I am the first in my immediate family to graduate from college. After high school, I decided to pursue nursing, though it really was not a good fit, so I went to a private beauty college and received my cosmetologist's license (which I still keep up to date!) So, after a couple of years cutting hair, I decided to pursue my real passion, which was radio broadcasting. Women in radio were becoming more prevalent, and I went to a private broadcasting school, got myself my first full time radio gig in Santa Maria, and then I spent quite a few years (as the WKRP jingle says) "moving town to town, up down the dial." When the communications industry was deregulated in the 1990s, the already difficult business was made harder and I knew I needed to go back to school to get a more stable life, so initially I went to Victor Valley College for their respiratory therapist program, but then the English department there saw right through me and said, "You're an English major!" This meant transfer to university. VVC did not offer an English degree then, so I received my associate degree and transferred to UC Riverside.

What was your favorite thing about UC Riverside?

UCR is a great campus! I loved everything about my time there. I spent two years at UCR, and because I got all of my lower division coursework completed at VVC for English and history, I got BA degrees in both English and history, which set me up for going to graduate school to get my master's degree in English Composition at CSUSB.

What was the most challenging thing you encountered when it came to transferring to a university and how did you overcome it?

As a nontraditional student I faced a lot of challenges. I was an older, returning student, and I was also a first generation college student, so no one I knew could blaze the trail for me. I also felt a little out of place sometimes, but that was just my own anxiety because all of my professors and classmates were so helpful and supportive. I had wonderful counselors who helped me every step of the way. Once I saw the IGETC at VVC, it was easy for me to follow and get all of the classes I needed to transfer.

Is there anything that you wish you would have known before going to UC Riverside that you didn't find out about until after the fact?

If I were advising my somewhat younger self, I would absolutely make sure to take advantage of every opportunity for scholarship money.

Did you go to college with the intention of getting the job you have now?

Yes, once I decided to major in English, I knew that teaching at the community college level is what I wanted to do. I love the community college system and BCC in particular. As a community college graduate myself, I know how important it is to students and their families.

What advice would you give to someone who's considering transferring to a 4-year university?

Just do it, but be sure to ask for help and guidance along the way! There are lots of resources, so just ask.

ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT— Marlo Brooks, transferred to CSU-San Bernardino

Please tell me a little bit about yourself?

I am a Jacksonville, Florida native who moved to California in 2013 to attend college, now, a first-year transfer student from Barstow Community College, and a first-generation college student, majoring in English at California State University of San Bernardino. I am the Vice President of the Student African American Brotherhood (SAAB), striving for African American recruitment and community involvement.

Why did you choose to transfer to CSU– San Bernardino?

In college, we're always being taught to start setting our path towards our career goals. I fell in love with higher education when I realized that most students in my classes first language was not the English language, so I chose to become a college professor to better bridge the language gap in the classrooms with the students struggling to write formally. I chose CSUSB because I had begun networking in the High Desert communities and I felt that the San Bernardino School District would be the best place to grow, as an educator and a community leader.

What is your favorite thing about CSU–San Bernardino?

My favorite thing about CSUSB is the role the college plays in its community and even its city. In my time here, I have been able to mentor students in the K-12 system, as well as create platforms to increase the African American enrollment on campus. Also, living on campus made it easy to adjust to my new surroundings in an entirely new city. The Resident Assistants (RA) on duty are helpful and they coordinate monthly events within housing to get students familiar with each other and to provide that campus housing experience.

Is there anything that you wish you would have known before going to CSU-San Bernardino that you didn't find out about until after the fact?

For me, the transition from a community college to a university was a journey. Once I felt that I had mastered being a student at BCC, it was time to graduate and apply my knowledge on a bigger scale; on a university level. I learned that going from a semester to a quarter system was the biggest challenge of all, but I adapted rather quickly because I had to. There was no time to dwell on the transition; I just had to jump right in and make the necessary adjustments to ensure my future.

Do you feel that you have been challenged in your coursework at CSU-San Bernardino?

The courses are much more of a challenge because they force the students to dig deeper to look for the underlying meaning of subjects and matters pertaining to our education curriculum, politics, scientific methods, and much more. As a student, those are the type of roles that our degrees will lead us into, so the challenge was welcomed, and I adjusted to it rather quickly. It's the repetition of it all that causes you to look ahead and to be better prepared before class starts.

What kind of advice would you offer to a BCC student looking to transfer to (your university)?

To take advantage of the campus amenities and the clubs and organization on campus that are strictly set out to help students achieve their full potential. There is so much more to gain, here at CSUSB, outside of your college degree so get involved and build your networks on campus and in the community to enhance your college experience and your professional portfolio; I have! #GoCoyotes #Yote4Life
